

X: An element designed to allow the action of externally generated EM fields on the beam
 D: An element designed to allow the coupling of some fraction of the beam's EM field to an external load

